Dear [Redacted] and PRB Colleagues,

(b)(3) CIAAct
(b)(6)

Attached please find my final galleys for my book, which was entitled Victims of Delusion, but which I have renamed The Interrogator. I am glad to provide it to you, as we are now only a couple of weeks from concluding our long work together on this project.

I am of course anxious to conclude this last step as quickly as possible. I would be happy to speak with you, meet with you, or take any other step that will accelerate our reaching the conclusion of this last step.

I know you are sensitive to the time constraints, and financial constraints, under which publishers work once an author arrives at this stage of the process with the PRB. I count on you, therefore, to process this final review very quickly; the publication date is July 5 . There is no time to lose.

As you will read in the attached cover letter, I have only added about 4,500-5,000 words to the manuscript. No other text has changed. I have deleted some text. Almost every other word of the book is exactly as the PRB approved it.

Thank you for your prompt attention to my book. I look forward to speaking, or meeting, with you in the coming days.

Sincerely,

UNCLASSIFIED

Subject: FINAL GALLEYS OF THE INTERROGATOR

Attention:

(b)(3) CIAAct

(b)(6)

Dear

(b)(3) CIAAct

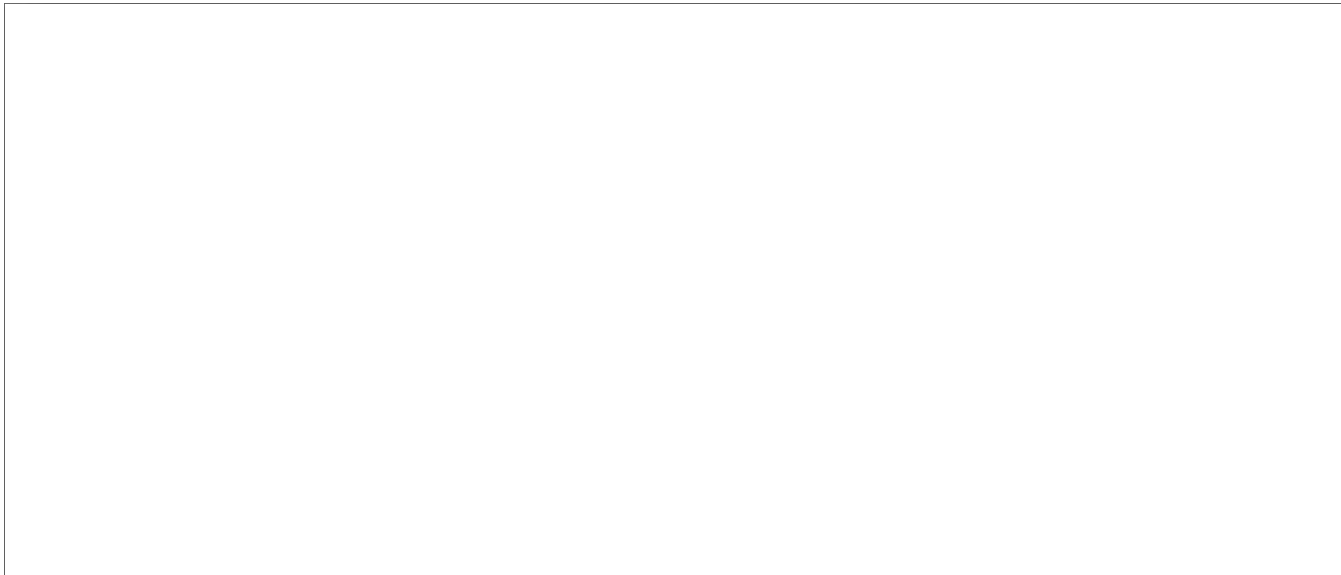

(b)(6)

Attached please find the final galleys of my book, The Interrogator, the manuscript of which the PRB approved during exhaustive and conclusive work with me under the title Victims of Delusion.

(b)(5)

As you are aware, my publisher is working under a very tight publication schedule, now well in process. This is typical. Nation Books, however, has particular time-sensitive and financial obligations: They have put the book on an accelerated publication schedule in order to meet the announced publication date of July 5, 2011. This deadline and schedule affects publishers, printers, editors, copy-editors, retail outlets, etc. throughout the United States and beyond, affects Nation Books' financial and legal relationships with numerous other companies, and affects many hundreds, even thousands, of jobs. It is critical, therefore, for you to meet your legal obligation to return the manuscript to me no later than thirty days from receipt: by April 2, 2011, so that I may then give it to them.

(b)(5)

Sincerely,

Glenn L. Carle
